

ABSTRACT

An emanator for evaporation of a liquid therefrom is provided. The emanator includes a first material and a second material that is disposed adjacent to the first material. The emanator is configured such that a liquid travels through the emanator at a rate no less than a rate at which it would travel through the first material alone and no less than a rate at which it would travel through the second material alone.